

Every drop counts

Posted: Friday, December 6, 2013

By Josh Allen Hi-Desert Star

By Josh Allen Hi-Desert Star

Every drop counts

Warren's well was dug by hand in 1881 by Chuck Warren and his family. The well was the first in the Morongo Basin.

YUCCA VALLEY — An interactive exhibition at the Hi-Desert Nature Museum is teaching visitors the importance of the water cycle and its value to life in the Morongo Basin.

"Water in the Desert," presented by the Hi-Desert Water District, is comprised of various informational displays and historical facts about the changing landscape of water in the region.

The exhibit outlines the history of water in the Morongo Basin as well as the current projects which are underway to ensure the stability, availability and quality of water in the Morongo Basin.

The exhibit has been on display since Sept. 19 and will continue through Jan. 18.